BILD 83 Business Communications (Soft Skills) in Biology

Tuesdays 9:00-9:50 a.m. in person
Open to Biological Sciences undergraduates

Students will learn about soft skills,
how to develop them and apply them in the workplace.

Soft skills that will be covered include:
leadership, problem-solving, nonverbal and verbal communication, presentation skills, speaking up and communicating ideas, confidence and self-awareness, teamwork, persuasive speech, how to breakdown science (academic papers) and communicate it broadly, conflict resolution

The purpose of this class is to support students in becoming effective leaders and collaborators in the workplace, and for them to gain critical skills needed to secure jobs and internships.

Leaders from the life sciences industry will join class as guest speakers.
